Wildlife Problems Affecting Animal Care and Control

As of July 1, 2010, Palm Beach County Animal Care and Control will no longer be able to send Animal Control Officers to pick up wildlife such as orphaned baby birds or mammals. The Division will continue to handle rabies surveillance for Palm Beach County, which includes quarantine, testing, and response to rabies vector species and human or animal exposure.

While Animal Care and Control has assisted in transporting wild animals to the rehabilitation centers in Palm Beach County, budget restraints have now forced the shelter to stop. The goal of Animal Care and Control is to focus on the safe haven and veterinary care for lost, abandoned and unwanted domestic animals, adoptions, lost pets, enforcing county, state and federal animal laws and providing effective programs to protect the health, safety and welfare of domestic animals and humans in the county.

Residents who find injured birds or wildlife in need of rescue should contact Busch Wildlife Sanctuary in Jupiter, 561-575-3399, or SPCA Wildlife Care Center in Ft. Lauderdale, 954-524-4302, or visit www.buschwildlife.com or www.wildcare.org.

Additional names of individuals who rehabilitate wildlife may be obtained from the Florida and Wildlife Conservation Commission at 561-625-5122 or visit their website www.myfwc.com.
